Fremington Local Nature Reserve

Fremington Local Nature Reserve is comprised of two separate areas: Lovell's Field and Leat Meadow.

Lovell's Field

Lovell's Field is 4.1 Ha and was given to North Devon District Council following the development of the adjacent Taw Meadow Estate. It is a low-lying wet grassland important for both wildlife and flood prevention. Kingfishers are regularly seen darting along the stream.

The northern part of Lovell’s Field is fenced and grazed to help prevent the area becoming rank and overgrown and to help the less aggressive plant species to flourish. There is no public access to the grazed area but access to the southern part of Lovell’s Field is from the rear of the village green (adjacent to the B3233).

Leat Meadow

Leat Meadow was acquired by Fremington Parish Council in 1999 along with the adjacent recreational area, Griggs Field. The 3 Ha (7 acre) site is a mixture of woodland, coppice, scrub, wetland and grassland. 62 species of plant have been recorded growing here and the site is important for the marbled white butterfly. Access to Leat Meadow is from the northern end of Griggs Field.

The reserve can be reached on foot from the Tarka Trail following the public footpath immediately west of Fremington Pill. For cyclists on the Trail follow the road from Fremington Quay and then turn right to the centre of Fremington.

Fremington is 3 miles west of Barnstaple on the B3233. There are regular buses along this road. For further information phone Traveline 0871 200 22 33 http://www.travelinesw.com

Fremington and the Local Nature Reserve lie within North Devon’s Biosphere Reserve, designated by UNESCO as a special place for people and wildlife.

Local Nature Reserves

Local Nature Reserves (LNRs) are all about connecting people and wildlife. They are statutory designations, looking after biodiversity and giving people the opportunity to experience the natural world on their doorstep. They are a shop window for best practice, promoting ways in which to help the wildlife on your own patch. They are also an education resource for schools and colleges, providing an outdoor classroom for hands-on learning.

The Local Nature Reserve has a Management Plan that has been agreed by Fremington Parish Council, Fremington Environment Group and North Devon Biosphere.

When visiting the Fremington Local Nature Reserve please follow the Country Code.
